Starting up in September...

As we move into September, numerous opportunities for new experiences and challenges arise.

The start of the academic year inevitably affects many of us as children begin new classes, schools, universities, colleges or training opportunities. These 'rites of passage' contribute to a sense of change ahead as we head towards autumn.

Often, too, we find ourselves thinking about 'new things' because we've had a holiday. Whether it's been a lazy, relaxing time or a very active, stimulating, 'on the go' summer, a break of any kind will have interrupted our usual routine and – especially if we've been away from home – given us experience of different places and people. There will have been contrasts with our normal practices, providing some pause for thought.

So now is a good time to consider taking up something new. There is much on offer that can enrich the days ahead.

Perhaps we might try volunteering for some community activity that would interest us and help others, as Lynn mentioned last month; or we might look out for a class or course to learn something new or advance an existing skill.

We might seek to join a social club or group of some kind or arrange a couple of day trips with friends to 'somewhere different'. Or it may be that we resolve to challenge ourselves simply by trying 'different' food occasionally or reading a 'different' type of book.

Yes, change of any kind may be daunting but – as the late Maya Angelou (American author and civil rights activist) reminded us – without it there would be no butterflies...

Whatever lies ahead for us in the autumn, let's try to look for opportunities to enjoy a 'new season', with hope, optimism and some excitement.

Happy September...

With best wishes

Harvest 2023

Harvest celebrations have been an important part of life in our communities for many generations. The parish of Brooke had one of the first “Harvest Festival” services in the country; so noticeable that it featured in an article in The Times.

We know that many people still enjoy coming to church to keep the harvest traditions and so it has been decided that every parish in The Langhale Benefice (though sadly not quite every church) will have a Harvest Thanksgiving service this year. You will find details of when these will be held with the lists of church services elsewhere in this publication.

As well as the traditional hymns and prayers, we will be focussing on farmers and considering their contribution to our communities and lives. The collection at each service will be sent to YANA (You Are Not Alone), a local charity which supports farmers, their families and others who work in farming, particularly with mental well-being. You can find out more about them on their web-site: <https://www.yanahelp.org/>. If you wish to make an electronic donation you can do so through their web page or at “Just Giving”.

Please consider supporting your local parish church by attending the Harvest Thanksgiving service. Churches are wonderful places to meet others in your community and harvest is a really positive time to get together and celebrate all that we have in our lives.

~Lynn~
